Acknowledgements

The compiler greatly appreciates the kind assistance of the staff of the Thomaston Public Library in making their holdings readily available. Thanks also to the Courier Gazette, Inc. and especially to Ray Gross who greatly facilitated transcription by allowing me to borrow their bound volume of volumes 4 through 8 several years ago. Thanks also to Nick Noyes and the fine people of the Maine Historical Society for making the only known first volume available.

A special thanks to Lew Rohrbach and Picton Press for advice, editorial and technical assistance, and the opportunity to share in the excellence of what he and the Picton staff do so beautifully and well. Thanks also to the Maine Genealogical Society for agreeing to recognize this work as part of their Special Publications series.

I would also like to express gratitude and appreciation to Debra Porter who came along at a crucial time and assisted in a thorough check and review of all entries using the original issues and volumes. She made what would have otherwise been a tedious chore a pleasant task. The accuracy of the work is in a large measure due to her assistance and careful eye for detail.

Introduction

Newspapers long have served small-town America as a window to the outside world. Equally importantly they have cemented links within the local community, celebrating the joys and successes and sharing the disappointments and pain. The vital statistics published in the Thomaston Recorder during the years 1837-1846 served just such a function, celebrating marriages and births while mourning deaths. They constitute an important resource of genealogists and local historians interested in early nineteenth century present Knox County and vicinity, adding flavor and depth to what might otherwise be mere names and dates.

This volume is a companion to the vital statistics extracted by Charles and Ruth Candage from the Lime-Rock Gazette, the Rockland Gazette, and the Courier-Gazette from 1846 to 1891. Their work was published in two volumes by Picton Press in 1989.[1] Local researchers will want to check those volumes also.

All vital statistics which appeared in any issue of the Thomaston Recorder during its entire life 1837-1846 are included in this book. There are many deaths and marriages listed, but only seven births. A number of these records do not appear in any other source while others appear in the vital records of the town of Thomaston but without the detail, color, pathos, and humor given here.

The area now called Thomaston was formerly a part of the organized plantation known as St. Georges Lower Town, which also included present Cushing and St. George. When incorporated 22 March 1777, Thomaston contained a considerably larger area than it does today. At that time Thomaston included the present towns of Thomaston, South Thomaston, Owls Head, and Rockland. The latter three communities were still part of Thomaston when the Thomaston Recorder was being published. The subscribing community served by the Thomaston Recorder was in reality much larger than Thomaston. There were no competing newspapers published locally in the eastern part of what was then Lincoln County and is today Knox County. The Thomaston Recorder was read by people from Waldoboro to Washington, and from St. George to Appleton and Camden.

The population of old Thomaston rose steadily as increased commercial trade, shipbuilding, limeburning, and fishing fuelled a rapidly expanding local economy. Population figures for the original Thomaston, including present-day Rockland, South Thomaston, and Owls Head, based on original Federal census returns are as shown on the following page:

Year	Population	Families	Average Family Size
1790	801	139	5.8
1800	1,397	229	6.0
1810	2,100	332	6.3
1820	2,605	419	6.2
1830	4,221	722	5.8
1840	6,227	1,071	5.8
1850	9,225	1,618	5.7

On 28 July 1848, not long after the Thomaston Recorder ceased publication, original Thomaston was dramatically reduced in size, both demographically and geographically. On that date South Thomaston was set off and incorporated as a separate town, as was East Thomaston. On 17 July 1850 East Thomaston became known as Rockland. Later, on 9 April 1921, Owls Head was set off from South Thomaston.

A predecessor paper, the Thomaston Register was "the first weekly newspaper ever established in this town or anywhere in the old county of Lincoln east of Wiscasset...".[2] It began publication on 17 May 1825 and continued under that name until September 1831. A change in ownership that year resulted in a new name, the Independent Journal under which it continued until 1845. Following the Independent Journal, a variety of new papers appeared in Thomaston: the Maine Temperance Advocate in 1833; The National Republican 1832-1837; the New England Chronicle in 1835; and the Thomaston Republican 1839-1841. None of these papers had particularly long runs, but they generally preceded and may have influenced the 1837 debut of the Thomaston Recorder.[3] The first issue of the Thomaston Recorder newspaper was published on 23 August 1837 in "West Thomaston" (the Mill River area of present-day Thomaston). Historian Cyrus Eaton described it as:

> ...devoted to no party or sect, but friendly to religion, morality, temperance, and the diffusion of correct information. Conducted on these principles, it gave general satisfaction, and was liberally patronized..." (Eaton, 1:385).

After a successful nine-year run, the final issue appeared on 1 October 1846. At that point the Thomaston Recorder slipped quietly into history. The paper was revived briefly in 1847 under the title Star and Recorder but was discontinued for good in 1848. No issues of the Star and Recorder seem to have survived. The lamented demise of the Star and Recorder left a local journalistic gap subsequently filled by the Lime-Rock Gazette, the Rockland Gazette, the Democrat and Free Press, and the Rockland Opinion. The Thomaston Recorder was the chronological link between the earlier Thomaston papers and those that succeeded it. It was the legitimate ancestor of the present Courier Gazette newspaper of Rockland, Maine.

Weekly issues of the Thomaston Recorder appeared in quarto and contained "Religious Reading, selected tales, original communications, poetry, commercial, agricultural, news, anecdotes, temperance, & c." The Thomaston Recorder mirrored local affairs and interests and gave the inhabitants of the eastern part of old Lincoln County a window on the affairs of the nation and the world.

A typical first page generally focused on entertainment, and contained fictional romantic and adventure tales, often in serial. The more staid second page was devoted to political and social news, some editorial commentary, letters from readers, and advice on morality and social behavior as well as items from Augusta, Washington, and around the world. The third page contained smaller news items and anecdotes, vital statistics, marine journals, advertisements, list of letters in the post offices, municipal and business announcements, and personal ads. The fourth and final page contained more business advertisements and notices, some news items, and probate and estate notices. In all, it was an entertaining, useful, and informative paper that well-served the needs and desires of its readers and their communities.

The transcriptions included in this book generally were made verbatim, copied just as they appear in the original issues. Lengthy obituaries such as the account of the death of Congressman Cilley from a duel and the deaths of Presidents Harrison and Jackson were noted, but not fully transcribed. Several other lengthy obituaries, tributes, and funerary poetry similarly were not transcribed in full.

Clearly not all local marriages and deaths were reported for publication. The editor, upon hearing some complaint, noted:

> "Frequently in case of death the relative think hard that it does not appear in print.— Printers are supposed to know not only their own business, but that of everybody else. It is the duty of the relation, in all cases when their friends die, to hand in their names and age. So also in the case of marriage." (Thomaston Recorder, issue of 10 December 1840)

At one point, a prolonged silence in news matrimonial merged with advice and social commentary encouraging eligible singles to "commit matrimony":

> "We have not had the pleasure of publishing a marriage for the last seven weeks. Only Thin, seven weeks and no marriages, and that two in a village where there are seven unmarried ladies to one unmarried gentleman. "The world must be peopled, said Shakespeare. "Increase and Multiply," was the decree of Supreme Wisdom. We hope the young men of Mill-River will take the hint. (Thomaston Recorder, issue of 24 May 1838)

The printer and publisher of the Thomaston Recorder was Hezekiah Prince Coombs. The editor was his cousin Hezekiah Prince, Jr. Coombs was born in South Thomaston on 1 Sept 1814, the fourth of nine children of Col. George and Rebecca A. (Mann) Coombs. He began to learn the printer's trade of Edwin Moody in Thomaston in 1828 as before noted and also did some whaling. Eventually heeding his own editorial advice, he married Lucinda Spofford on 14 Aug 1842.

They made their home in Thomaston. Mr. Coombs labored mightily at the presses, became a registrar of deeds, and served the community in other valuable capacities as well. Eaton notes that Mr. and Mrs. Coombs had one child, Charles S., b. 16 March 1844. Ironically, neither his marriage nor the birth of his child were duly noted in the Thomaston Recorder!

Few copies of the Thomaston Recorder survive today, due largely to the practical needs and necessities of its readers and the times in which they lived. Old newspapers made excellent kindling for starting fires. Before the advent of pulp and commercially produced tissue paper, that daily necessity was probably the undignified fate of many an issue of the Recorder. Even during the years of publication, back issues were apparently scarce. Editor Coombs, himself, was compelled to advertise:

> "WANTED.— A fair compensation will be paid at this office for the following back numbers of the Recorder:— Nos. 29 and 40 of Vol. 1st. Nos. 4, 23, 30, and 37 of Vol. 2nd." (Thomaston Recorder of 12 November 1840)

Fortunately some frugal readers were able to provide the missing issues, as a complete run of all issues survives to this day. Volume one is in the possession of the Maine Historical Society. Volumes two through nine are in the kind and capable hands of the Thomaston Public Library. The Courier-Gazette of Rockland has a copy of volumes four through eight. The Maine Historical Society and Thomaston Library volumes are all in excellent condition. The Courier-Gazette's volumes are well-worn and in tougher shape.

The vital statistics from the Thomaston Recorder are of most immediate use to genealogists. However, examined closely, they provide an interesting glimpse of old Thomaston through the eyes of a hard-working, articulate, and humorous editor. They reveal much about the nature of life and society in old Thomaston, as well as faintly reflecting once vital lives not so different from our own. These people of the past experienced love, suffered loss, and left behind priceless legacies of family and community that we can identify with and appreciate today.

Deaths In St. George, 8th ult., Capt. Thomas Whitney, aged 31 years. By the death of Capt. W. the business community has sustained an irreparable loss. Society is called to mourn the bereavement of one of its brightest ornaments—the poor and needy, a kind benefactor—friendship, a dear friend—the family circle, a beloved and cherished relative—the church, a pure disciple of the meek and lovely Saviour. In every relation of life, Capt. W. was as early esteemed as he is deeply mourned. He was a devout and exemplary member of the Baptist church. To his distant friends and relatives, it will be consoling to know that his dying hours were full of the consolations of religion; that his departing spirit, like the setting sun, cast back its expiring rays upon the remaining hours of childhood, yet radiant with the bright promises of christianity, that it was only setting to rise in another and better world.

In this town, 11th inst., Miss Margaret Stackpole, aged 23.

Died in Friendship on the 1st inst., Lieut. James Thompson, aged 93 years. The deceased was in early life, a soldier in the Colonial army, stationed at Boston. Was at Castle William, in Boston harbor, during those memorable periods, the destruction of the tea—the massacre in Boston, and at the time when Col. Dolrimple removed his regiment to the Castle, as a place of greater security from the assaults of the impudent Yankees of those times. Becoming convinced that the cause of the Colonies was a just one, he left the British army, and took the side of his country. He recieved the appointment of Lieutenant in one of the companies which were raised for the defense of this part of the country, and was an active and efficient officer. But it is not as the soldier—not even as a Hero of the Revolution, that the memory of this good old man is revered. His memory is dear to the friends of our holy religion, as the humble, faithful and exemplary Christian—to his children and descendants, of whom more than 180 can not be numbered, as the affectionate father and wise counsellor—and to his neighbors and acquaintences, as an uncommonly honest and pure-hearted man.

In announcing the death of this amiable girl, I cannot refrain from saying a few words in remembrance of those virtues which endeared her to all who knew her. She bore her sufferings through a long and severe illness with almost unparallelled fortitude, cheerfulness, and resignation, and when death came she welcomed it as the Angles of Mercy calling her home to that rest and happiness for which she had long been ready and anxious; and the only consolation left for her afflicted friends under this grievous dispensation of Providence is the knowledge that their loss is her gain. Deaths It is our painful duty to record the death of a dear and much beloved friend. By the last Natchez Free Trader, we learn that Mr. Albert Newcomb is no more. He died at Natches, on the 3d ult. Mr. Newcomb, was a native of Warren, Me. He was a young man of sterling worth. The Natchez paper thus speaks of his death: "Departed this Life, yesterday, Sunday, November 3rd, at 12 o'clock, Mr. Albert Newcomb, of the firm of Newcomb & Lee, printers in Maine street Natchez. Mr. Newcomb was born in Warren, Lincoln County Maine, where he learned the art of typography--at which he labored successively in Boston, New Y. and Natchez up to the time of his death which occurred at about the age of 24 years. Albert Newcomb came to this city with a fair reputation, and habits of honor, integrity and industry which gained him an enviable reputation. He was one of the publishers of the late Southwestern Journal, published by the Jefferson College Lyuceum. Connected with the largest fire company in the city, during the late tremendous conflagrations he was seen by the light of the fiercest flames in the post of danger and of duty. We feel and lament his loss. The Society of Independent Odd Fellows, of which he was a member, stood by his dying bed, soothed and alleviated his sufferings, as they would have done those of a natural brother, and then four hours after his dissolution, followed him arrayed in their insignia to his long home, above the city on the banks of the Monarch of Streams."

At Tampa Bay, Mr. David Crawford (seaman) of Warren, Me. Information concerning his estate can be received at the Post Office in Thomaston.

Deaths In Cushing on the 23d ult., Benjamin, son of Edward and Jane Kelleran, aged four years and nine months. Rarely has affliction come more suddenly or more heavily to the hearts of parents, than in the present instance. In the morning all seemed well concerning the child. Health was in his breath, cheerfulness in his countenance, joy in his eye. But before the sun went down the pride of a father's heart, and the darling of a mother's affections lay cold in death. In the course of the day he had found and eaten a root commonly called wild parsnip. As soon as the danger was known a physician was called, and every means was employed to arrest the effects of the poison, but all in vain. The little sufferer lingered in agony about three hours and then expired.

In Union, Oct. 3d, of consumption, Miss Philena Cummings, eldest daughter of Mr. Suel and Sophia Cummings, aged twenty-four years and nine days. By this dispensation of Providence her parents is bereaved of an affectionate daughter—her brothers and sisters of a kind and affectionate sister,—and her acquaintances of a beloved companion. Her end was triumphantly glorious. A few minutes before her exit, she gathered up her remaining energies, and conversed upon the subject of religion, and exhorted her friends to prepare to meet God. Several times with a countenance lighted by the joys of Heaven, she spoke of the goodnes of God to her soul, and the importance of religion to die by, and then sweetly fell into the arms of Jesus.

Deaths In Warren on the 12th ult. Mrs. Hannah, wife of Robert Boggs, aged 72. She looked well to the ways of her household and ate not the bread of idleness. A few days before her death she gave up the cares of this life and found this not to be her continuing city but sought one out of sight.

Died at Surry, (Me.) Miss Louisa J. Barrett, aged about 23 years. The end of this amiable girl was peculiarly distressing—She had been laboring under a disease that caused a slight aberration of intellect for many weeks, when she met her death it is supposed accidentally by drowning. She has we doubt not entered into rest; for the last years of her short life were marked by firm, consistent piety. And while we mourn that in early youth she was taken from all the useful and endearing relations of life we rejoice in the belief that the opening grave was to her the gate of Paradise.

In this town, Frances Woodhull, daughter of the Rev. R. Woodhull.

In this town, Mr. John Blackinton, aged about 87.

At Mobile of the yellow feaver, Capt. Levi Ulmer, a resident of East Thomaston. Thus has this fearful disease in its ravages taken away another to add to the number of northern men which have already fallen its victims. We listen to the accounts of the sweeping pestilence that is desolating those southern cities, making widows and orphans in every part of the Union, and we have but faint conceptions of the suffering that is wringing a thousand hearts, and but little sympathy for it. But when it takes from our immediate vicinity one whose face and voice is familiar to us, whom we have known and esteemed, and leaves his place at home desolate, his wife comfortless, and his little ones unprotected, then we begin to understand and feel the force of the calamity. Capt. Ulmer was known among us as a respectable and worthy citizen, an esteemed and up right man. He has left a wife and six children to mourn the loss of their kindest and best earthly friend.

Deaths A MURDER was committed in Cushing, a mile or two from the new Toll Bridge, on Tuesday of last week, which has caused an immense excitement in this community. One Joseph Conner was found nearly dead in the lane near the house of Arthur Counce, on Tuesday evening, and died on Wednesday morning. He was found lying upon his face, on the snow, his skull badly fractured, and life nearly extinct. A Corner's Inquest was held upon the body and gave a verdict that the deceased came to his death by blows inflicted upon the head by some person or persons to them unknown, but supposed to be Lemuel Counce of Cushing. [Lengthy account continues, p. 2].

In this town on Saturday night last, Mr. Josiah Haskell a soldier of the Revolution, aged eighty four years. He was remarkably hale and vigorous to the last, and died suddenly and unexpectedly. The moment of his departure was not known. He wrapped the drapery of his couch about him and lay down to pleasant dreams, and slept the dreamless sleep of death. He was a good man, and full of years, has gone to rest like a shock of corn fully ripe. Thus, one by one, those who lived at the time of our country's struggle for Independence drop away. Soon the last one will perish from among us, and the deeds of those days will be recounted by those whose voices are but the echoes of those, long since departed.

Died in this town 11th ult., Mr. Andrew Ulmer, aged 67. Mr. Ulmer bore the protracted illness, which terminated his life on earth, with great patience and resignation—supported by that grace of which for many years he had been a happy partaker. In his last hours, he was favored with a sweet peace, in believing those precious promises of the gospel, which have been as a guiding light to thousands, through the gloom of mortality to the bright regions of eternal day. He calmly sank into the arms of death, and left this suffering world. [Funerary Poem follows].

Deaths The death of Mrs. Betsey Eames, aged 86, was pub. last week. She was formerly of Attleborough, Mass. A perfect resignation, and humble acquiesence to the divine will has for many years characterized her life. During her last sickness her setting sun shone more brightly, and she calmly descended the dark valley of death with the most happy assurance of immortality beyond the grave.

In York, in November last, Mrs. A., wife of Dr. E. A. McIntire, and daughter of Capt. J. S. Thompson, aged 29 years. Truly best were the last hours of this happy Christian. She possessed everything dear and attractive to life. With three little ones most devotedly attached to their parent, a kind and affectionate husband—yet for her sudden departure, she was perfectly reconciled. A few hours previous to her death, she called her distresed mother, and only sister, to her side, when she sang the hymn "why do ye mourn departed friends", and following the prayer, she died in exulting peace. Seldom do we record the death of one whose benevolence to society and connections were like hers. But while we mourn we would meekly say, God gave, and kindly takes away.

Vol. 9, No. 45, Whole No. 456, Thursday 3 [sic, s/b 1] Oct 1846
Marriages In this town on Sunday Morning, by Rev. D. Small, Mr. Wm. H. Blood and Miss Cordelia A. Gallopp, both of Thomaston.
Deaths Joseph Berry, son of Capt. James and Julia Dow, aged 1½ years.

In this town, after a very short illness, Mr. Benjamin Tucker aged 67. An affectionate husband and father, a quiet and obliging neighbor, an industrious and worthy citizen, a lover of the sanctuary and of Christian society, he lived esteemed and respected by all, and died by all regretted.

In this town, Mr. James D. Wheaton aged 81 years.

EVERY NAME INDEX

The following Every Name Index compiled by Picton Press contains a total of 3,007 entries and includes all names found anywhere in this book. Women are indexed whenever possible under both their maiden and married name(s). Maiden names are given in parentheses, thus Mary (Smith) Jones. When the maiden name is unknown, it is given thus: Mary (--) Jones. As these are verbatim transcripts of original records, there is a much wider range of spelling variations than would be found in other types of records. As always with genealogical records, readers are cautioned to check under all conceivable spellings. We have grouped some similar spellings together and in such cases have added a cross reference to other spellings, as an aid to your search.
